

Outside the Sun is Still Shining and the Birds Still Sing

A silent hush descends upon the once busy streets, a silence created by the impact of an invisible power, we can neither see or touch and yet it has the power to take away a life of someone we hold dear, in the breath of a moment. It is stronger than any army or leaders who rule by force and power, as it is invisible.

Yet out of the window the sun still shines and the birds still sing and the call of spring speaks of new life and urges the buds to unfold into the grace of belonging.

Nature knows nothing of the fears of man but responds to the silent strength which awakens new life into being.

In the silence an invisible power was also speaking to the soul of mankind, to abandon fear and greed forever. In the space which was created in the stillness, an echo of who we really are stirred as a reminder, to put away the madness and return to the centre of belonging. To talk share, and with Openness of heart and mind.

In the space, an opportunity was given to right all wrongs of the past and to learn to truly love again, not the love of things but of people in a world that had forgotten, how to be, and truly live in the presence of each other and stop to hear the birds sing.

Because of this a new hope filled the hearts of people, and a vision to create a better world began, where all could live together in the great dance of existence and through the realization of this great love, the invisible power could harm no more and just as the flowers in spring, the blossoms of love and kindness filled the gardens of the earth, a new world was born!
